The Conference

This Autumn conference, held once again with the support of SCC Heritage Conservation Team, continues the Surrey Research Framework process. Following the 2001 Conference Archaeology in Surrey in the 21st century and the subsequent publication of Aspects of Archaeology and History in Surrey in 2004, the Surrey Research Framework was launched in 2006. Since then, special interest groups of the Society and others have used it as a basis for the development of further research. It has always been intended that the Framework should continue to evolve. The conference will examine ways in which that is happening and invite further involvement in the process.

This year's conference takes a look at industrial archaeology and the contribution it can make to understanding economic and technological development
